Floater

If you have to cancel a shift (ahead of time or day of) and no one from that child's team can cover, you now have the option to call a floater.

Names, numbers, and availability will be distributed soon from your Senior.

A floater will come in and cover your shift (barring any plans) and your hours will then be covered.

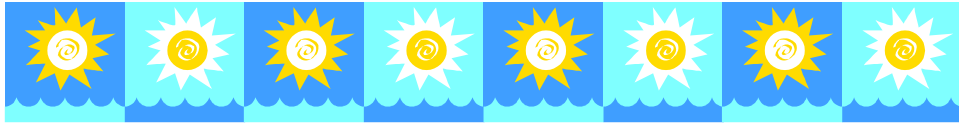

Once you know what is going on with your shift, call your Senior and the parents to let them know if no one will be there or which floater will be filling in.

If you are interested in being a floater, you can always contact Char at cgeissman@hotmail.com

A Good Read

One of America's most popular authors, Jodi Picoult has earned a reputation for crafting riveting, topical fiction. In House Rules she examines how being different can have dire consequences. Teenager Jacob Hunt has Asperger's syndrome. A forensic science wizard, he follows his scanner to show up at crime scenes and give law enforcement officials his advice. But when his tutor is found dead, he becomes a suspect. Suddenly, his Asperger's traits—not looking people in the eye, tics and twitches—look more like guilt in the view of police.
